PROGRAM

During Week 4 of the FASCA After School Program, children engaged in a variety of creative, physical, social, and problem-solving experiences that supported their overall development and wellbeing. Activities such as DIY tube paper planes, LEGO challenges, STEM plant pot projects, flip book creation, stop motion club, literature club, and cooking club encouraged children to strengthen their creativity, imagination, fine motor skills, and critical thinking abilities. Through collaborative experiences including soccer games, basketball matches, dancing club, children's council meetings, and group choice activities, children built confidence, teamwork, communication, leadership, and social interaction skills. STEM and construction-based activities provided opportunities for inquiry, experimentation, and persistence while encouraging children to explore new ideas and solve problems independently and with peers. Literacy, movement, and creative arts experiences further supported self-expression, coordination, and emotional wellbeing. Overall, the weekly program promoted active participation, positive relationships, resilience, and a sense of belonging within a fun and engaging learning environment.
